

Special Education 4000 Challenge Exam
Department of Special Education and Rehabilitation
Utah State University

1. Students wishing to challenge the Special Education 4000 course should submit a letter to the undergraduate committee requesting permission to challenge the course. The letter should address two issues:
  - a. Clear justification for the challenge, and
  - b. Other pertinent information, i.e., relevant experience in a classroom or other setting(s), course(s) previously taken with passing grades(s) and why the course(s) provide sufficient background in education of persons with exceptionalities to justify the challenge (even if the course(s) are not accepted by USU as equivalent course(s)).
2. Students who are permitted to take the challenge exam must be registered for Special Education 4000 at the time they are taking the challenge exam.
3. Student challenging this course, by taking the challenge exam, will be given one opportunity only to pass the challenge exam.
4. The test must be proctored, taken on webct, and student will be given 75 minutes to complete the exam
5. Student must take the challenge exam before the last day to add a class as documented in USU course bulletin.
6. Whatever grade the student earns on the challenge exam will be the grade to go on their transcript. Refer to the course syllabus for grade scale. If student elects to take the class to improve their grade may do so. The grade will change once the course is completed and the course grade will replace the exam grade. A grade of C or better is required for licensure.
7. If student earned a C- or below, i.e., a failing grade, then the student will take the course that same semester in which they are registered.
